

QUICK COMPS - GREEN KNIGHT

King Arthur stood at the huge, wooden round table. He scanned the eyes of each of the knights gathered there. Sir Lancelot was seated to the king's right. He was his most trusted friend and most noble of the knights. Sir Hector was to the king's left. Among the others was Sir Gawain, the king's cousin who had recently had an encounter with the Green Knight. Behind the king was Merlin, the court's wizard and the king's chief advisor.

"My Knights of the Round Table," King Arthur said, "Today we gather to hear Sir Gawain's story of his battle with the Green Knight."

The king sat down with Excalibur the sword resting in his hand.

"The Green Knight is not our enemy," Sir Gawain said as he stood, "But rather our friend. He has taught me the importance of honesty and justice. A lesson all knights need to learn."
